Fate of the Negro.

Hon. John S. Pendleton, is a candidate for Congress from Virginia, and in the course of an able address to his constituents, he says:

"I have seen negro slavery, I believe, wherever it exists, and in the different stages of its transition, from absolute bondage to perfect liberty, in all those parts of this continent wherever it did exist, and in which it has now ceased to exist, as also in that large country where it still exists-the Brazils.

As a mere laborer—by which I mean a man who executes manually the orders of another, without the exercise of any intelligence of his own—the African in the Southern States of the old Union was the best cared for and most respectable man of his class in any part of the world-immeasurably above Peons or Boors, or any of that social grade anywhere. As a man, he was far superior to any of his race, in Africa or out of it. His doom, I lament, as I regard the total extinction of his whole rane, so far as this country is concerned, a mere question of time. In several States of this continent, in which I have resided for years, wiser and better men than the aboliyears, water and netter men than the aboit-tionist of New England have tried the exper-iment of making him a gentleman with precisely the same result overywhere. It has been at the failure in every instance and in all climates and forms of government, except in few and rare cases, and then only when reared by gentlemen of the first class, who are also first-rate disciplinarians. There is no necessity of war now for making him a citizen—the pretext on which he was made a freedman; but I suppose he will be made so. and that will be some advantage to Virginia at least. Made a citizen, he has the run of all the States, and will naturally go to his good and honest friends.

STRONG-MINDED WOMEN AND POLITICAL PAR-SONS.

Mr. Pendleton is particularly sharp upon strong-minded women of the Miss Dickinson stripe, and upon political parsons, of which "The political parsons and strong minded women are like all such creatures, in all coun-tries, and in all times. With our aboriginal tries, and in all times. With our aboriginal tribes, they are prophets, the medicine men, the conjurers, and the squaws—people who live by loafing, and stealing, and other practices not more reputable, decent, or virtuous, In war they are utterly worthless, and in peace as mischievious and malicious as they are worthless in war—always cowardly and always crusi—saints in face, but demons in heart, and whether at scenes of conciliation and peace, at the stake or torture or the wardance. peace, at the stake or torture or the war dance. n the lobles of revolutionary tribunals, or at the "auto de fe," the same miserable and detestable wretches."

A True Picture,

We shall not recover in this country, for twenty-five years, says the New York Journal of Commerce, from the evils brought upon us in the interests of despotiem, by the Stantons, the Holts, and their radical allies. The very sense of freedom has been blunted in the popular mind, and the nation has forgotten what was once the birthright of an American city of the programment of the programme ican citizen. Free speech, free discussion, in which once rested our liberties, have been wrested from our people so long by the over-bearing insolence of office holders and their bearing insolence of office holders and their supporters, that they are scarsely prized as they once were. The Tribune says that Secretary Stanton 'seems incapable of comprehending that this country has, or should have, any other law than his arbitrary will.' No one doubts the truth of this assertion; yet what effect does it produce on the public mind? There was a day when the very fact that such an assertion could be made at all, with even the suspicion of its possible truth, would have aroused every city and village in the land. Public meetings would have been beld at every cross roads. The indignant very cross heart of America would have sent the blood to cheeks of very boys in the streets, and a voice of a free nation would have been heard asserting to the world the power of its free-dom. Now, you listen—you admit—and you sit down quietly and wonder how long it will

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

1. Exected, That the Federal Government exists only by virtue of the Federal Constitution, and possesses no powers not granted by that instrument.

2. Exected, That the expenence of the last four years has demonstrated, in an embent degree, the wisdom of our foreathers in insisting upon a strict construction of the Federal Constitution, and we utilizerly abhor the sephietry by which violation, the most plain and salusible, of the letter sad spirit of that instrument have been and are defended.

3. Decoded, That the reserved rights of the States are essential to the existence of a kepublican Government, and to the liberties and prosperity of the people and we are, therefore, unsilerably opposed to consolidation of all power in the hands of the Federal Government, the inevitable consequences of which would be to make that Government the most despote, corrint and oppressive in the would.

4. Resided, That the Democracy of Ohio will maintain and defend, as they always heretofore done, as essential to the existence of our Federal system of Government, the tire doctrine of State spitem of Government, the tire doctrine of State rights not unlifted or not accession, but the the theory of that system as laid down in the Vignina and Kanticky resolutions of 1798, as interpreted by their authors, the one by Madison in his report in 1798, and the other by Jenferson, in his selection of State and the other by Jenferson, in his selection of State and the other by Jenferson, in his selection of the states, and are therefore entitled to all the reserved rights of the States, and to their disc representation that is a selection of the States, and to their disc representation of the states, and to their disc representation that the contraction of the States, and to their disc representation that the contraction of the States, and to their disc representation that the contraction of the States, and to their disc representation that the contraction of the states, and to the contraction of the states.

void, the so called someded States are still in the Ur as States, and are therefore entitled to all the reser-rights of the States, and to their disc represents in Congress, and to vote all future elections for Fri deat and Vine-President, and any attempt of the ge-eral Government, or any part thereof, to depither of these rights, would be an assault upon rights of every State in the Union and an effort overthrow the Government ordained by the Con-tation.

S. Essoiced, That to each State belongs the right to determine for itself the qualifications of its electors, and the General Government can not, nor can any department thereof interfers directly or indirectly with the exercise of fine right, without a palpable violation of the Constitution, and of the reserved rights of the Stotes.

of the Stotes.

7 Resolve!, That the effort now being made to confer the right of suffrage upon negroes, is an institutions by bringing the right to vote into distrace; that the negroes are roll competent to the exercise of that right, nor is it necessary to their safety or protection; on the contrary, its exercise by them, if attempted, would be fraught with terrible colamities to both them and the whites; we are therefore unequivecally opposed to segre suffrage.
